US journalist Cokie Roberts, a 'founding mother' of NPR, dead at 75

"Trusted voice" Roberts rose to prominence in a field dominated by men.

American journalist Cokie Roberts, regarded by National Public Radio as one of its "founding mothers" and a prominent political commentator on ABC News, died on Tuesday at 75 at her Washington home from complications of breast cancer, her family said in a statement.

Roberts worked in radio as a foreign correspondent for CBS and a congressional correspondent for NPR in the 1970s. She went on to become a prominent political commentator on ABC News, serving as the network's chief congressional analyst.

"I don't just see this role of women as caretakers in the world that I cover, I see it in the world I live in."

Cokie Roberts, Wellesely College commencement speech (1994)

NPR President Jarl Mohn called the Emmy Award winner one of NPR's "founding mothers" in a statement, describing her as "the trusted voice that Americans count on when political news breaks."

She was born Mary Martha Corinne Morrison Claiborne Boggs on December 27, 1943, to a prominent political family in Louisiana. She got her nickname Cokie from her brother, who struggled to pronounce "Corinne" when they were children.

Her father, Thomas Hale Boggs, was a major force in New Orleans Democratic politics who served in the U.S. House of Representatives for 25 years and became majority leader in the early 1970s when his party ran the chamber. After his plane disappeared over Alaska in October 1972, her mother, Lindy Boggs, was elected to his seat and served through the end of 1990.

Roberts rose to prominence at a time when broadcast news and political analysis was mostly presented by men.

Two of Roberts' journalistic subjects, former U.S. President George W. Bush and his wife, Laura Bush, noted her drive and humor in a joint statement.

"She covered us for decades as a talented, tough, and fair reporter," their statement said. "She became a friend."

Roberts won numerous awards for her work, including three Emmys. In 2008, the Library of Congress recognized her as a "Living Legend."

Roberts wrote several books about overlooked women in American political history, including "Founding Mothers," about the wives and other female relatives of the men who helped create the American republic. Her last book, published in 2015, was "Capital Dames: the Civil War and the Women of Washington, 1848-1868."

She often spoke of women as playing a civilizing role in society.

"I don't just see this role of women as caretakers in the world that I cover, I see it in the world I live in," she said in her commencement speech at Wellesely College, her alma mater, in 1994. "Slowly, slowly, slowly but definitely, the workplace is becoming a more humane place because of the presence of women."

She is survived by her husband of 53 years, Steven Roberts, two children and six grandchildren, her family said in a statement. REUTERS

NBCU's streaming service 'Peacock' to launch in 2020

2 Comcast Corp.'s NBCUniversal will name its upcoming streaming service "Peacock," offering a broad slate of original content, including "Dr Death" starring Emmy and Golden Globe winner Alec Baldwin, the company said on Tuesday. Peacock, which will also offer classic sitcoms like "The Office" and "Parks and Recreation," is scheduled to launch in 2020, NBCUniversal said. The company owns traditional television network NBC, whose logo features a peacock. The service will compete with streaming giant Netflix Inc. and Walt Disney Co.'s upcoming Disney+ streaming service as well as other digital subscription options, as traditional media companies seek to attract online viewers. Details on pricing and distribution will be announced closer to launch, the media company said. REUTERS

New York ban on flavored e-cigs to be enforced Oct. 7

3 New York became the second state to ban flavored e-cigarettes on Tuesday after its Democratic governor called for emergency action in response to concerns about their rising use among teens and a nationwide spate of lung illnesses. Gov. Andrew Cuomo on Sunday called for an urgent meeting of the state's Public Health and Health Planning Council to consider the proposed ban. The panel on Tuesday voted to adopt the prohibition, which applies to all flavored e-cigarettes besides menthol, Cuomo's office said in a statement. The state Department of Health pledged to provide retailers with a two-week grace period before conducting site visits to enforce the ban starting on Oct. 7. New York is the second state in the nation to introduce such a ban, after Michigan did so earlier this month. REUTERS

Pirates' Vázquez arrested on child solicitation charges

4 Felipe Vázquez, a star relief pitcher for the Pittsburgh Pirates, was arrested in Pennsylvania on Tuesday on charges of soliciting an underage girl for sex and sending her an obscene video, authorities said. Florida authorities began investigating the Venezuelan-born Vazquez in August after learning of allegations he had a sexual relationship with a teenager in Lee County, the Florida Department of Law Enforcement said. The girl is now 15. In a video that Vázquez sent to the girl in July, he performed an unspecified sexual act, the statement said. Major League Baseball in a statement said that Vázquez was placed on administrative leave following his arrest. "We take this matter, and these charges in particular, extremely seriously," Pittsburgh Pirates President Frank Coonelly said. REUTERS

Uber and Lyft drivers protest app updates

Uber and Lyft drivers are fighting back against new app updates that impact when and where they can drive.

Uber and Lyft drivers joined forces Tuesday to protest their working and pay conditions, bringing rush-hour traffic to a stop on the FDR Drive.

NBC reported that black cars started to arrive northbound on the FDR at around 8 a.m., with a huge amount of cars lined up behind them. As of 8:45 a.m., traffic was still heavy.

The Independent Driver's Guild, which represents Uber and Lyft drivers, said that they were protesting changes to the app that they believe will result in drivers being paid less.

> "We have said for months that the unintended consequences of regulations will be less driver flexibility."
> Harry Hartfield, Uber spokesperson

In a statement, the Independent Driver's Guild explained, "Uber is following Lyft's lead in controlling its supply of cars in response to the Taxi and Limousine Commission's rules setting a pay floor for drivers based on how much time they spend carrying passengers. Both companies blame the city for forcing them to limit when drivers work."

Uber will now lock drivers out of the app at certain times or at certain locations that few riders are requesting. It was reported that Uber was forced to make this change after drivers were shut out of Lyft's app.

Uber spokesperson Harry Hartfield told Metro, "We have said for months that the unintended consequences of regulations will be less driver flexibility, and the changes to the app are a direct result of the Mayor's regulations."

Campbell Matthews, a Lyft spokeswoman, echoed Hartfield: "Because of the TLC regulations, we're forced to make changes to the Lyft app to not allow drivers to be online if there isn't enough demand for rides. The TLC's approach is bad public policy, and we are working diligently to support drivers during this change."

Spotted lanternflies invade Brooklyn cargo ship

A cargo ship in Brooklyn was put under quarantine due to a spotted lanternfly (SLF) infestation. The ship was transporting cargo from Pennsylvania to Red Hook terminal. It is not clear how long officials will keep the ship quarantined.

NBC reported that the ship will need extensive fumigation after inspectors discovered it carried spotted lanternflies.

NBC spoke with a Customs spokesman, who told the outlet that the origin of the bug is unknown and specialists are "on the scene eradicating this pest threat."

The spotted lanternfly is an invasive species from China, Bangladesh and Vietnam.

The New York State Department of Environmental Conservation says that "SLF pose a significant threat to New York's agricultural and forest health. Adults and nymphs use their sucking mouthparts to feed on the sap of more than 70 plant species. This feeding by sometimes thousands of SLF stresses plants, making them vulnerable to disease and attacks from other insects.

"SLF also excrete large amounts of sticky 'honeydew,' which attracts sooty molds that interfere with plant photosynthesis, negatively affecting the growth and fruit yield of plants," they added. "New York's annual yield of apples and grapes, with a combined value of $358.4 million, could be impacted if SLF enters New York. The full extent of economic damage this insect could cause is unknown at this time. BECCA GLASSER-BAKER

Gold Medal flour recalled for E. coli risk

Voluntary recall applies to 5-pound bags with "used by" date of Sept. 6, 2020.

BECCA GLASSER-BAKER
Rebecca.Glasser@metro.us

General Mills announced a recall on their 5-pound bags of Gold Medal Unbleached All-Purpose Flour with a "used by" date of Sept. 6, 2020.

The flour is being voluntarily recalled for potential E. coli. The company discovered during testing that there was a potential presence of E. coli. E. coli, a.k.a. Escherichia coli, is usually a harmless bacteria that lives in the intestines of people and animals. Although E. coli is harmless, some can be "pathogenic," which means they can cause illness.

This recall is specific to this product; no other types of Gold Medal flour are affected by the recall.

It should also be noted that in the announcement, both the Food and Drug Administration and Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) warn consumers that they should refrain from consuming raw products with flours.

General Mills also noted on their website, "Do not eat uncooked dough or batter made with raw flour. Flour is made from wheat that is grown outdoors where bacteria are often present. Flour is typically not treated to kill bacteria during the normal milling process."

It is also important to note that General Mills says: "E. coli O26 is killed by heat through baking, frying, sautéing or boiling products made with flour. All surfaces, hands and utensils should be properly cleaned after contact with flour or dough."

COURTESY FDA

Although there have been no confirmed reports of illness from the flour, the company is doing this out of precaution.

According to the CDC, some symptoms of E. coli include: "severe stomach cramps, diarrhea (often bloody), and vomiting. Some people may have a fever, which usually is not very high (less than 101˚F/38.5˚C). Most people get better within five to seven days."

Some infections can be life-threatening, and others can be mild. If you or someone you know is suffering from these symptoms, contact your doctor right away.

The very young, the elderly and those with compromised immune systems are those most susceptible to foodborne illnesses.

The information on the recalled bags are as follows:

Package UPC 000-16000-19610-0

Better if Used by Date 06SEP2020KC

If you have this item in your pantry, General Mills wants you to toss it out and call General Mills Consumer Relations at 800-230-8103 or fill out the form on its site.

GM switches health insurance costs to union during strike

General Motors Co. shifted health insurance costs for its striking workers to the United Auto Workers union as its members walked the picket line for the second day on Tuesday.

The UAW on Monday launched the first company-wide strike at GM in 12 years, saying negotiations toward a new national agreement covering about 48,000 hourly workers had hit an impasse.

This year's talks between the union and GM, Ford Motor Co. and Fiat Chrysler Automobiles were expected to be tough, with thorny issues such as health care costs, profit-sharing and the use of temporary workers on the table.

Negotiations between GM and the union resumed on Tuesday morning.

Workers on picket lines outside GM factories waved signs declaring "UAW On Strike." In Bowling Green, Kentucky, they blocked the three entrances to the assembly plant, which normally builds the Chevrolet Corvette.

REUTERS

Salina Alexander, who works in the Kentucky plant's paint shop, said the strike is about GM sharing some of its profits with union-represented employees who helped bail out the carmaker during its bankruptcy. "We hung in there with them. They can give us something back."

Ex-campaign chief defends Trump at chaotic impeachment hearing

Trump confidant became first witness to testify in official investigation.

Corey Lewandowski testifies at the House Judiciary Committee's first hearing of their impeachment investigation. REUTERS

President Donald Trump's former campaign manager on Tuesday acknowledged that his former boss enlisted him to try to limit the Russia election interference inquiry but defended Trump and tangled with Democrats during pugnacious testimony to a U.S. congressional panel mulling whether to impeach the president.

Corey Lewandowski, a Trump confidant eyeing a run as a Republican for the U.S. Senate in New Hampshire, testified under subpoena to the House of Representatives Judiciary Committee at a contentious hearing that once again exposed America's gaping partisan divisions ahead of the 2020 presidential election.

"The president didn't ask me to do anything illegal and he never asked me to keep anything secret," Lewandowski told the Democratic-led committee during a hearing spanning about 5 1/2 hours.

Lewandowski told frustrated Democrats that he would refuse to answer questions about his conversations with Trump that Democrats view as evidence of obstruction of justice — a potential impeachment charge — and often dodged their queries.

But Lewandowski confirmed that Trump had asked him in 2017, when he held no government post, to tell then-Attorney General Jeff Sessions, the top U.S. law enforcement officer, to limit the scope of Special Counsel Robert Mueller's Russia inquiry in a way that would have ended scrutiny of Trump's 2016 campaign.

Lewandowski also told the committee that he regarded as "a joke" Trump's remark to him that the president would fire Sessions if the attorney general did not meet with Lewandowski. Sessions, who eventually was fired by Trump in 2018, ultimately did not meet with Lewandowski.

The committee's Democratic chairman, Jerrold Nadler, called Lewandowski's conduct at the hearing "completely unacceptable" and was considering seeking to hold him in contempt of Congress.

Lewandowski appeared at the panel's first hearing since it made clear last week it is actively considering articles of impeachment against Trump. REUTERS

US wants to seize all money Edward Snowden makes from new book

DOJ sued Tuesday, citing breach of nondisclosure agreements.

The United States filed a lawsuit on Tuesday against Edward Snowden, the former National Security Agency contractor who leaked secret documents about U.S. telephone and internet surveillance in 2013, saying his new book violates nondisclosure agreements.

The Justice Department said Snowden published his memoir, "Permanent Record," without submitting it to intelligence agencies for review, adding that speeches given by Snowden also violated nondisclosure agreements. In 2013, Snowden wrote "Everything You Know about the Constitution Is Wrong."

The United States is seeking all proceeds earned by Snowden for the book, the Justice Department said. The lawsuit also names the "corporate entities" behind the book's publication as nominal defendants.

Ben Wizner, an attorney with the American Civil Liberties Union who represents Snowden, said the lawsuit was without merit.

"This book contains no government secrets that have not been previously published by respected news organizations," he said in a statement, adding that Snowden would have submitted it for review if he thought the government would review it in good faith.

Representatives for the book's publisher, Macmillan Publishers, and its unit Henry Holt & Co., did not immediately respond to requests for comment.

Snowden has lived in Russia since he revealed details of U.S. intelligence agencies' secret surveillance programs.

Though he is viewed by some as a hero, U.S. authorities want him to stand in a criminal trial over his disclosures of classified information.

Speaking by video link at an event in Berlin to promote the book, Snowden said that while he had signed a nondisclosure agreement to maintain secrecy, he had also sworn an oath to uphold the U.S. Constitution.

"You've told the government you're not going to talk to journalists. You've told them you're not going to write a book," Snowden said. "At the same time you have an oath to defend the Constitution. And the secret that you are asked to protect is that the government is violating that Constitution and the rights of people around the world."

Israeli election too close to call: Exit polls

REUTERS

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's battle for political survival looked set to continue for days or weeks after Israeli exit polls at the end of Tuesday's election showed the race too close to call.

The surveys by Israeli television stations showed Netanyahu's right-wing Likud with 31-33 of parliament's 120 seats compared with 32-34 for the centrist Blue and White led by former general Benny Gantz.

The exit polls indicated that Netanyahu's ally-turned-rival, ex-defense minister Avigdor Lieberman, could be the king-maker, with the backing of his far-right Yisrael Beitenu party critical to the formation of any ruling coalition.

The ballot followed an inconclusive election in April in which Netanyahu showed rare political weakness and failed to put together a government. Netanyahu, at 69 Israel's longest-serving prime minister, seeks a fifth term after a decade in power.

Likud and Blue and White were tied at 35 seats in April's election, and would need to enlist support from smaller parties with a wide range of agendas for a coalition government.

As in the election five months ago, his opponents, including Gantz focused on corruption allegations against Netanyahu, who denies any wrongdoing. REUTERS

NO CHILD PROTECTION TO MICROSOFT "FILTERS"

My grumble is to Microsoft. We just purchased an $800 Windows 10 Dell Laptop. I try to be a responsible parent by setting up a "Family" group on my son's new computer. Come to find out that NONE of the filters on Microsoft 10 work. I set all filters correctly for a 13 year old, set blocks for adult sites and none of them work. I even tried blocking specific porn sites and they pop right open! My fear is that millions of parents are putting their trust in these "user friendly" parental controls on Microsoft without actually testing them. They block NOTHING. I was on "chat" for 1.5 hours with Microsoft Tech last night only to be told to BUY more security or they tried to walk me through a complicated Network Settings feature that no layman would ever figure out. Parents, TEST your child's web browsers for adult sites if you are only putting your faith in Microsoft. You'll see that your kids have access to everything despite the security settings you put on Windows 10. I just spent $800 on a laptop that doesn't provide basic web security for my child.

Gemini Spend more time nurturing a relationship with a loved one. Whether it's a youngster, friend or romantic interest, what you share will bring you closer together.

Cancer If you don't do the work, you can't expect to be rewarded. If you set your priorities and a budget, you'll live up to your expectations. It's OK to be different.

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

"Don't Get ANY Surgery Until You SeeThis…"

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best "Treatment Formula" For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going is be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD "Treatment Formula" A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW....

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these "gel injections" without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patent. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our "Treatment Formula."

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action… step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

‘This is really the kind of piece that doesn’t age’

Treat Williams will be at The Academy at Metrograph event this weekend for a 40th Anniversary screening of “Hair.”

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences’ is well-known in the Big Apple for hosting one-of-a-kind screening events that delight film buffs and moviegoers all year round. This Saturday marks another special occasion with the 40th Anniversary Screening of “Hair” (also the 100th anniversary of United Artists) followed by a Q&A with two stars of the film, Treat Williams and Annie Gold. Williams sat down with Metro to give us the scoop on what to expect at the event at the Metrograph (7 Ludlow St.) on September 21 at 5 pm.

What does it mean for you for the Academy to host this special 40th-anniversary screening of “Hair”?
I had been with Miloš (Forman) three or four times in the last year of his life and we had such wonderful dinners reminiscing about “Hair”— I know it’s one of his favorites out of all of his films. I have such a great love and admiration for all of his work, not just “Hair,” and I sometimes think those of us who have been in films that become classics, that it’s a bit of an obligation for us to keep those films present. You’d be surprised and shocked at how many actors have not heard of James Cagney, Humphrey Bogart or Marlon Brando. The older I get that, the more I want to make sure young actors are aware of the history of film and not just from the past few years. I will always sing the praises of Miloš Forman and I hope [this screening] gets a little more buzz out there for him.

Treat Williams. GETTY

What do you think the Q & A will add to the screening experience for audiences?
I think it will add a personal touch— I’ve always had questions like ‘How did you do that?’ or ‘What was it like when you were shooting that?’ or even ‘How did they get that performance out of you?’ So I think the questions will give great insight on the making of the film and the technical side of things even. I’ve always thought the discussions were wonderful because it gives the audience a chance to engage and communicate with those who were there when we made it, and I’ve always enjoyed being in the audience and hearing an actor’s personal perspective of what it was like to make a picture, how they prepared and what happened when shooting.

What are some memories that stick out to you from filming “Hair?”
I have to tell you, I remember every day of shooting like it was yesterday. I could talk to you for five hours about every single day of shooting. It’s the kind of thing where I won’t remember where I left my glasses, but I’ll remember a particular day from “Hair.” But I think the vague general memory of it was that it was a joyous year. Where else as a young actor doing your fourth movie could you leave your basement apartment in the Upper West Side and throw on a pair of jeans and a vest— which was my wardrobe but became my clothes for the year- – and walk into Central Park and make a musical?

Why do you think “Hair has continued to have such a presence over the years?
This is really the kind of piece that doesn’t age. What I mean by that is you could listen to a singer like Rudy Vallée from the 1920s and it sounds like it’s the 1920s, it sounds like it’s from 100 years ago. But when I see the film, I’m astonished at how present it seems. It’s not dated in any way, but I think there is something to say about the feel of the behavior being present. The songs are also wonderful, it’s an extraordinary score and the whole film was shot beautifully it’s truly great filmmaking— those films are the ones that really seem to last.

Overall what do you hope audiences take away from the event?
I do hope that they carry out an appreciation for Miloš Forman and if they haven’t seen his films before perhaps to go out and watch more of his work and then become more interested in films of Eastern European filmmakers or French or Italian— or that it might just spark someone’s interest in film in a way that they hadn’t realized before.

Greta Kline of Frankie Cosmos on slowing down (to a certain point)

The prolific songwriter discusses her newest album, "Close It Quietly."

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

The music that songwriter Greta Kline creates inhabits the small moments of life in an abundant way. For years, she has been recording her own brand of bedroom pop under numerous monikers and uploading them online at the same pace that many of us exercise. These days, the creating process has slowed down only a little as she has settled into her most notable persona — Frankie Cosmos —releasing her second studio album for Sub Pop earlier this month, "Close it Quietly".

The album — recorded with her longtime band mates, Lauren Martin (synth), Luke Pyenson (drums), and Alex Bailey (bass) — finds Kline delivering one of her most focused and immediate selections of songs to date. And as with her past output, this is saying something, as the 21 songs that are included on "Close it Quietly" hover just around two minutes on average with some clocking in around thirty-to-forty seconds. When she reaches two and a half minutes on the album's closer, "This Swirling", it feels like she is reaching prog territory in comparison. The record feels like the work of an artist who has spent years consistently putting in the work. A culmination of constant sharing and experimentation with song craft.

But with the band's ever-busy touring schedule, Kline's output has slowed down to only one or two releases per year — as opposed to, say, five — with an emphasis on creating the right representation of her creative mind-set at that point in time.

"Before we were a 'real band' I was just putting out music every month," says Kline of the process of releasing music at this point in her life. "Every time I made a demo I was putting it out. Now it seems like so much less to me. In the past it seemed like I was putting out everything I thought of. Now it's like, I'll write ten songs and one of them will make it onto an album."

With someone as prolific as Kline is, the emphasis on chiseling time out to record amidst the recording and touring cycle has put things into perspective. "I think my time at home has a different meaning to me now," she explains. "Because we tour so much of most years. When I'm at home, I really want to be working on something. For us, this past Winter was that. Just being able to record feels different than when you're touring. It just feels like precious time."

With so many ideas being brought to the table, she has found a real partnership with her band, whose contributions to the new album provide the right amounts of impact and pathos when required.

"I feel like we've, over the years, developed a really good style of communication with each other. We have more of a streamlined way of communicating. It's always hard because it's four people talking about what we should do with a song," Kline explains. "Something that I really appreciate about my band is they know when a song doesn't need to be added to. There are a couple of solo songs on the album where they were like, 'Yeah, I don't think we can add anything to this'. Then when they do have something to add, they're like, 'Yeah, maybe we could add this there'. That makes me trust them. They're not greedy players (laughs)."

In a way, being a fan of Klines music brings a sort of reliable constant to your life. As every five or six months or so, you are bound to hear a continuation of her story through a collection of short songs that will catch you up on how she is feeling at that given time. It's like a conversation is resuming after being interrupted. I ask Kline if she views each song cycle in this way.

"I don't even think about the collections of songs as they're going to be an album," Kline says. "I think it does function in the way that you're saying where you get all of these snapshots and of course you have more of an understanding on a bigger thing because it's a bunch of short things. But I think it could be any bunch of short songs, it's just whatever I have. I think they're connected because they're from a similar time in my life. I write about the same stuff over and over, so that will also make them a little more similar or connected in some way. I don't necessarily think about the way the songs are working together to represent something, it's more that each one is a small moment and if you want to you can piece them together in some deeper understanding of life, or my life, or whatever."

Make sure to catch Frankie Cosmos at Webster Hall Sunday, Sept. 29.

The 'good-enough' home may be just perfect

NerdWallet is a personal finance website.

Constructed from aspirational Instagram feeds and reality TV, the dream home floats in the imagination like a castle in the sky but dissolves in the rain of hard numbers.

Chasing the dream can lure buyers to overextend themselves financially. Or the high prices can lead first-time homebuyers to delay a home purchase — and the opportunity to start building home equity.

For many homebuyers, buying a "good enough" home can be a sounder strategy, particularly for those most eager to become homeowners.

"I'd rather see people buy a good enough home versus buying a dream home and being cash-strapped over the next 20 years," says Alyssa Lum, certified financial planner and founder of Luminate Financial Planning in Herndon, Virginia.

Here's the beauty of a good enough home.

It has the essentials
A good enough home may not have artisan tile or stainless steel appliances, but it has the essentials.

Look for a home that's well-maintained, has "good bones" and is in a good location, says Kelly Roth, a real estate agent with Pearson Smith Realty in Ashburn, Virginia. A well-maintained home in a good location will likely increase in value and probably won't be a money pit.

Buyers tend to home in on cosmetic upgrades, Roth says, but she advises focusing on basics, like windows, the roof and the heating and air conditioning system. Then you're less likely to face surprise repairs just to make the house functional.

If you can't have it all — and most people can't — list the features you want, and decide where you're willing to compromise.

Amber Miller, a certified financial planner with The Planning Center in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area, bought her first home two years ago. It has features she wanted, such as hardwood floors and a separate dining area, but isn't flawless.

One of the bathrooms has outdated salmon-pink tile. "I thought, well, it's not beautiful but it's clean and functional," she says. "This isn't going to be the house I'm in forever, but it's good enough for now, and I love it."

"Good" is personal. A big yard could be a must for a family with a dog, but a pain if you hate yardwork.

And a good home matches your timeline. It should meet your needs for the years you plan to live there, which probably isn't forever if it's a first home, Roth says.

It doesn't squeeze your budget
A good enough home has a reasonable price for your budget. Lum recommends keeping your debt-to-income ratio under 30%. That's the percentage of gross monthly income that goes toward debt payments, including the mortgage.

Lenders will qualify buyers with considerably higher ratios. But that may not leave much for other expenses, says Trey Reed, a loan officer with MVB Mortgage near Washington, D.C.

"Maxing out (debt-to-income) is something I see people do, but not something I recommend," Reed says.

A good-enough home leaves you with enough money for other priorities, such as saving for retirement and emergencies, and for all the costs of ownership besides the mortgage. That includes home insurance, property taxes, utilities and maintenance.

"I'd rather have a house my family can grow into and we can fix up to make it our own rather than something we can't afford," Jenny says.

Their home has space for their toddler to play, is structurally sound and is in the neighborhood they wanted. Eventually, they'll make home improvements. But for now, it's perfect. After a block party in their cul-de-sac recently, Jenny says, "I came home and said, 'This is where we were meant to be.'"

Giants bench Eli Manning, will start Daniel Jones Week 3 vs. Bucs

Big Blue will roll out their first-round draft pick on Sunday against the Bucs.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The New York Giants announced on Tuesday morning that rookie quarterback Daniel Jones will be the team's starter in Week 3 against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Head coach Pat Shurmur's decision forces veteran quarterback Eli Manning to the bench, effectively ending his 16-year run as the franchise's starting quarterback.

"Eli and I spoke this morning," Shurmur told the team's official website. "I told him that we are making a change and going with Daniel as the starter. I also talked to Daniel. Eli was obviously disappointed, as you would expect, but he said he would be what he has always been, a good teammate, and continue to prepare to help this team win games. Daniel understands the challenge at hand, and he will be ready to play on Sunday."

It remains to be seen if the move will elicit a trade request from Manning, but he has a no-trade clause and his family that includes four children under the age of eight resides in New Jersey.

The decision to make Jones the starter is a move similar to the way Manning rose to power in New York.

After the Giants acquired Manning at the 2004 NFL Draft, the team went with veteran Kurt Warner for the first nine weeks of that season before the Ole Miss product took over.

Since then, he became one of the greatest quarterbacks in franchise history, passing for 56,537 yards with 362 touchdowns — both franchise records — while winning a pair of Super Bowl championships and MVPs.

At 38 years old, however, the question of Manning's football mortality has become a major topic of concern over the past few years.

Since winning Super Bowl XLVI, Manning went 38-59 as a starter with a 62.9-percent completion rating with 151 touchdowns and 97 interceptions. The last two seasons have been particularly rough for the aging slinger as he went 8-23 with an offense that lacked consistency and a stable offensive line — forcing the immobile quarterback to try and extend the play with his legs.

Manning's struggles prompted general manager Dave Gettleman to draft Jones out of Duke with the sixth-overall pick of the 2019 draft. While the pick was met with bewilderment, the 22-year-old put on an impressive display during the preseason, completing 29-of-34 passes (85.3-percent) for 416 yards and two touchdowns while putting pressure on Manning for the starting job.

Now, another rough start in 2019 has forced Shurmur's hands.

The Giants are 0-2 for the sixth time in seven seasons largely because of an offensive attack that has lacked any sort of threat.

Manning's inability to get the aerial game going — despite having his top-three receivers unavailable — made opposing defense's game plans much easier: Load the box, key in on Saquon Barkley, and watch the Giants offense go down in flames.

The Buffalo Bills executed the plan perfectly in Week 2 as Manning toiled. He completed just 57.5-percent of his passes for 250 yards and a pair of interceptions in a 28-14 loss.

Now with Jones at the helm, the Giants will get a first look at what their prospective franchise quarterback can bring to the table.

With a big arm and enough athleticism to extend the play with his legs, Jones' first opponent will be a Buccaneers team that has allowed just a single passing touchdown through two games and the third-lowest completion percentage to opposing quarterbacks in the NFL this year.

Hapless Jets in serious trouble after loss to Browns

That was ugly.

The New York Jets were embarrassed on Monday Night Football against the Cleveland Browns in a 23-3 loss as the absence of Sam Darnold was felt in full force.

The franchise quarterback is out indefinitely with mono, though he admitted earlier this week that he was feeling better and — in a best-case scenario — could be back by Week 5.

He can't come back fast enough for the Jets.

Backup Trevor Siemian lasted until the second quarter when he was leveled by Browns defensive end Myles Garrett and suffered an ankle injury in the process. It was revealed on Tuesday that he will miss the remainder of the 2019 season.

Luke Falk, New York's sixth-round pick out of Washington State last year performed admirably enough in relief, completing 20-of-25 passes for 198 yards. But he was constantly stalked by a relentless Browns pass rush that broke Adam Gase's offense.

The Jets were beaten down by the Cleveland Browns on Monday night and things might be getting worse. GETTY IMAGES

It was downright putrid. Especially with an offensive line that was as rigid as a piece of paper.

Cleveland recorded four sacks on the night — Garrett with three of them — while the Jets were outgained 376-262.

If it wasn't for Le'Veon Bell, it would have somehow been much, much worse.

The star running back accounted for 129 total yards in Week 2 (68 rushing, 61 receiving) where it felt as though he was left on an island to evade the Browns defense all on his own.

He did a few times, willing the Jets to their lone scoring drive of the game late in the second quarter.

But the Jets offense without Darnold lacks zero playmakers outside of Bell, which is a big problem for Gase. All the opposition needs to do — as it does similarly against the Giants and Saquon Barkley — is take the ball out of Bell's hands.

Then, watch the Jets implode.

The defense, which was undermanned, can only hold for so long when they are constantly thrown back onto the field by an offense that could garner little momentum.

With a short week, the Jets' offense is left scrambling with a daunting schedule ahead.

They head to Foxborough on Sunday to meet the red-hot New England Patriots, who have made mincemeat of their opening schedule.

Tom Brady and Co. have outscored their opponents 76-3. That trend is likely to continue against the punchless Jets.

The following week brings sanctuary in the form of a bye, but if Darnold isn't right by Week 5, things will only get uglier.

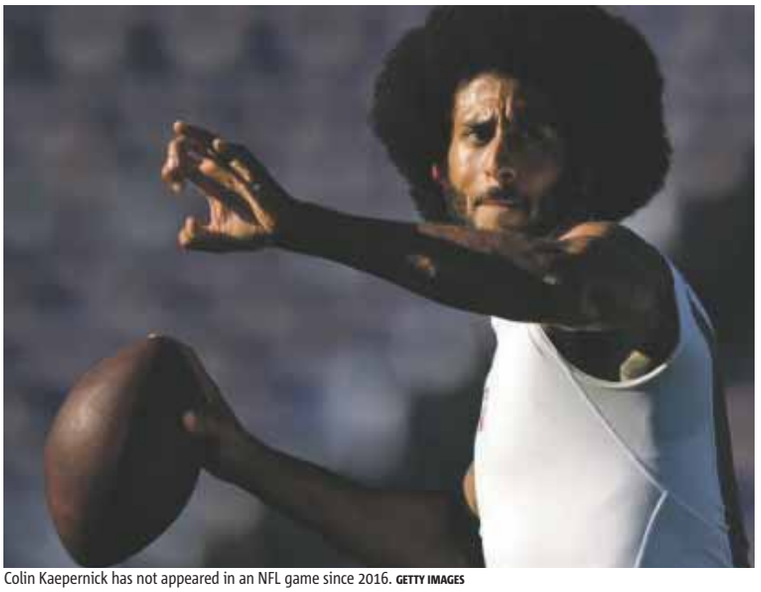
New York meets a pair of NFC East favorites, traveling to Philadelphia to face the Eagles before hosting the Dallas Cowboys in Week 6.

Based on the team's performance on Monday night, that upcoming schedule without Darnold could very well result in an 0-5 start for the Jets. JOE PANTORNO

Kaepernick still available for QB-needy Jets

With Siemian out for season, Luke Falk is currently the last QB standing for the Jets.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us



Colin Kaepernick has not appeared in an NFL game since 2016. GETTY IMAGES

Try and leave your non-football beliefs at the door for a moment and consider Colin Kaepernick suiting up for the New York Jets.

The veteran quarterback hasn't appeared in an NFL game since 2016 after the combination of a down season with the San Francisco 49ers that included injuries, a trade request, and his national-anthem protest.

In fact, his last two years in the NFL doesn't necessarily offer much promise. In 21 games, he completed 59-percent of his passes for 3,856 yards with a starter's record of 3-16. However, he threw 22 touchdowns compared to just nine interceptions during that span while adding 724 rushing yards.

It continued the trend of the now-31-year-old exhibiting an ability to take care of the football. In six NFL seasons, he threw 72 touchdowns and just 30 interceptions.

There was a time when Kaepernick was considered one of the most explosive quarterbacks in football, bursting onto the scene in 2012 and leading the 49ers to a Super Bowl appearance.

In the two lone seasons in which he played all 16 games, he put up 40 touchdowns and 18 interceptions while averaging 3,283 passing yards per year.

And still, he hasn't found a job in the NFL. You can speculate as to why. This writer will do no such thing.

There is no disputing that the Jets and their offense is currently in shambles.

Sam Darnold is out indefinitely with mono, Trevor Siemian — who hurt his ankle against the Browns on Monday night — is out for the season, and Luke Falk did little to add a spark off the bench in a 23-3 loss.

As of now, it feels as though the Jets are lambs being led to the slaughter with the New England Patriots, Philadelphia Eagles, and Dallas Cowboys all on-deck for the 0-2 franchise.

The Jets need another quarterback and an offensive playmaking spark outside of Le'Veon Bell and Kaepernick could be a low-risk, high-reward option.

As a dual-threat passer, coupling plus athleticism with a strong arm, Kaepernick has the tools to get the most out of the Jets offense in their current situation.

A mobile quarterback is needed behind a horrendous offensive line to extend the play and give a questionable receiving group time to get open.

Kaepernick can probably do that better than Siemian, Falk, or any other available quarterback on the market right now.

He doesn't need to be a superstar or a Pro Bowler. He just has to keep the Jets afloat while Darnold recovers.

And while the move will be met with mixed feelings from the Jets fan base, think of it this way:

Either he gets the job done, holds down the fort until Darnold returns, and the Jets helped prove that Kaepernick still has something left in the tank or he gets bombarded and his detractors can say "I told you so" all along.
